CHORUS.

When constabulary duty's to be done. The policeman's lot is not a happy one.

There are hundreds of applicants for appointment on the police force every year, and men can be found in every considerable group who just ache to don the blue and brass and wear numbers on their hats.

The policeman's pay is not larger than is received for any service requiring a similar or equal intelligence and talent, but the work to a sure thing once it is obtained; it's twelve months in the year, and the policeman need never worry for fear his month's pay will not

"Will you direct me to the Crystal Palace?" said a mild little old man who had just alighted, travelling-bag in hand, from a Cortlandt street ferry. He addressed a very young policeman in a brand-new uniform, and added: "I haven't been in New York in nearly forty years, but if I could see the Crystal Palace and the town I know I could get my bearings,"

"Say, you've got me!" ejaculated the bluecoat in reply. "Just wait till I go over and ask that other copper. I ain't been on the force but a few months." After a moment the young policeman returned and informed the stranger that the Crystal Palaco did stand at Forty-second street and Sixth avenue, but it was burned down in 1856, adding: "that was just five years before I was born. Bryant Park is there now."

The proceeding was typical of the New York "copper." He is a regular walking encyclopædia, a peripatetic map of the city; a bureau of information; a guide-post for the unsophisticated, and a guardian of the weak. He gives information cheerfully and carefully.

CHARLIE NEMP IS SATISFIED.

Policeman Charlie Kemp, who laid down the reporter's pencil to take up the locust. stood at the corner of Sixth avenue and Thirtieth street, dreamily humming in his rich tenor voice, "The policeman's lot is not a happy one," when he was interrupted by an EVENING WORLD reporter with the query: 'Isn't it? Why are you so discontented?'

"Isn't what?" "Isn't the policeman's lot a happy one?"

"Well, I should say! Happy? Blissful, my boy, blissful! Why right here in this precinct it's elegant. Don't we pass our days among the Sixth avenue shoppers? The most beautiful women, the loveliest, sweetest girls and the best dressers in the world?" Now that was the rosy view of the slim and

SERGT. TIMMS'S OPINION.

Ha, ha!" says Timms. "It's only a philosopher that has a happy lot any way. The policeman who understands and does his duty has a happy lot. The man who wants to do nothing and draw his pay has not a happy lot. It's a dog's life It's a way to earn a living, and not a very bad way. I think."

"What do you say, Sergt, Sheldon?" asked the reporter of the slender, rather delicate man, with soft, dark whiskers and bright eyes, who sat behind the desk.

The Western Association Proposes to Dictate to the League,

WITH MINOR BODIES AS ALLIES.

To Protect Themselves These May Support the Brotherhood.

They Fear the Inroads on Their Players by the Magnates.

The Western Association has its eye out for the League magnates, who are reaching westward for men to fill the places that will be left vacent by players joining the Brotherhood m w inent.

The meeting of the Western Association will take place, and invitations to attend it have been sent to managers of minor leagues all through the country.

The purpose of this is declared to be an offen-sive and defensive alliance of the miner organizations, the drift of which will be definitely determined after the meetings of the Brotherhood and the old National League.

It is asserted that Secretary Morton has a great scheme in his head for placing the Western Association in direct rivalry with the present National League in its attitude towards the smaller bodies, but will not fully develop his plans until he hears from proposals which he will make to the Brotherhood.

This movement only goes to show yet more clearly the wide reach of the baseball agitation and the infinite possibilities of change in store f r next season.

Next Monday the Brotherhood will hold its meeting and the full plans of the Players' National League will be made public.

Then the magnates. whose breath is just the least bit disturbed at present, will know exactly what they have to meet and will take definite action.

The delegrates to the Brotherhood meeting on Monday next are O'Rourke, Pfeffer, Brotthers, Andrews, Buffinton, Twitcheil, Sunday and Stricker or Twitchell.

Ward will preside at the meeting and for that reason was not chosen as the New York delegrate.

reason was not chosen as the New York delegate.

Keefe will act as secretary of the meeting.

It is now not at all certain that when the players are finally distributed among the different cities Ward will play in Brooklyn. The position of shortstop in that Club will be filled, however, by either Ward or Glasscock. If Ward goes to Brooklyn, Glasscock will play in New York.

The rumors which have been confidently expected by the players, charging that discord exists in their ranks, are already affoat.

One story is to the effect that at Monday's meeting heefe and Ward will give a public exhibition of the private enmity which, it is alleged, has for a long time existed between them.

The report is false.

Keefe and Ward are on the best of terms and much in each other's society. Both are hard at much in each other's society. Both are hard at work on Brotherhood matters. As to the story which tells of the Brotheras to the story which tens of the Brother-hood's weakening on account of many de-sertions from the movement. The Evening Would has it on the best of authority that up to the present there are but three players who are not fully determined to be of the Players' National League extractory.

Ational League next senson.

That Anson will not is certain, and that John Clarkson is as yet on the fence is an open secret.

The third man is not a "star," and whether he remains with the National League or joins the Brotherhood is not considered of much impurtance.

the Brotherhood is not considered of much importance.

It is said that to fight the Players' League the National League will join forces with the American Association clubs and that Brooklyn and St. Louis will become National League cities.

There is but little doubt that the Association people would like to see such a state of affairs brought about, but it is certain that John B. Day will not consent to such an arrangement.

Just what the League folks will do in case the Brotherhood's action does cause the minor Leagues to adopt measures to prevent the National League from scooping up all their best players is hard to say.

President Day says that in all probability there will be but six National League Clubs next year, and that those clubs will easily find their quota of players, and good ones, too.

The six cities which will represent the National League will, in all likelihood, be New York Chicago, Boston, Pittsburg, Philadelphia and Cleveland, though Minneapolis may have the call in place of Cleveland.

Indianapolis and Washington are the cities which will in all probability be given up entirely to Brotherhood clubs next year.

of the Cottage. Cuicago, Nov. 1 .- The State continued to day its chain of evidence to connect the Cronin tragedy with the Carlson cottage and the mysterious Mr. Simons. The most important link was furnished yester-day by salesman Hatfield, of J. H. Bevell & Co.'s store, who, when the blood-stained trunk found out at Lakeview was brought into the courtroom, positively identified it as the one he had sold to Simons, to be delivered at 117 South Clark street. Some cheap furniture was bought by the same man.

Martin McHale began the testimony of this morning.

He was a carpet-layer also in the employ of Reveil & Co. He had laid the carpet according to Simons's direction in the rooms in South Clark street.

Attorney Ingham, who was conducting the examination for the State, produced a roll of carpet, and handing it to the witness, asked.

'Was the carpet you laid at 117 South street, similar to this piece?'

Unhesitatingly the witness answered: 'That is the very carpet.'

What had happened now, and where had the carpet been tound that it should be brought into the case in this way?
The progress of the case can alone answer, for at this interesting point the State turned the witness over to the defense.

Mrs. Charles Carlson, daughter-in-law of the couple who owned the historic cottage, was called to the stand later.

She told of the hiring of the cottage by the man calling himself Frank Williams.

"Do you see that man in the court-room ?? the witness was asked.

"Yes, sir," was the startling answer.

"Point him out, please."

"He is the man there chewing."

Hurke was the man she meant, and when the witness pointed him out he stopped as though paralyzed.

His lower law hung in suspense, and the gaping hole in his face added to his stricken look.

An immediate attempt to smile and look unconcerned was a lamentable failure.

Word was received to-day that Edward Spellman, the missing District Delegate, has been found at Fortemouth, O., and will be here to testify on Monday.
